Iceland: A Land of Volcanoes, Glaciers, Sheep, and Hidden Elves
Iceland is literally a continent in the making. Sitting on the boundary of the North American and Eurasian tectonic plates, Iceland’s formation began by underwater volcanic eruptions 17 – 20 million years ago. Its geologic youth makes it an incredibly diverse landscape that includes 22 active volcanoes, 250 geothermal areas and 780 hot springs yet, at the same time, Iceland is home to the third largest ice cap on Earth. UW-Richland’s associate professor of geology, Dr. Norlene Emerson, will describe her recent travels to Iceland’s unique world of fire and ice.

In Search of the Fountain of Youth
Dr. Aharon Zorea is conducting research for his next book, one on the history of the anti-aging movement an examination of those who do anything to avoid looking, feeling, and acting old. Zorea will discuss some of the ways in which we see this movement in our modern culture. From Hollywood, to steroids, to miracle cures, we can see the evidence our society’s preoccupation with youth and beauty and its fear of aging and death. Audience members are encouraged to participate; they may even find some of their own observations in his final manuscript.
